New York City Police

Department Commissioner James O'Neill fired officer Daniel Pantaleo Monday over the controversial choking death of Eric Garner five years ago.

Eric Garner died after officers confronted him for illegally selling cigarettes outside a Staten Island convenience store in 2014. When Garner refused commands, Pantaleo and other officers physically restrained him and Pantaleo placed him in a chokehold that's a

Phoenix police required to report weapons drawn at people

By Daniel Uria
UPI

Police officers in Phoenix will now be required to self-document any instance in which they point a gun at a person.

The policy took effect on Monday, as Police Chief Jerri Williams and other city officials held a press conference to provide updates on recommendations made by the National Police Foundation to curb police-involved shootings in the city.

"This will allow us to have a real idea of how many times our officers are able to successfully de-escalate a situation with the potential of deadly force," Williams said.

Officers will be responsible for logging any instance where a weapon is pointed at a person when completing an incident report and a supervisor will be able to review body camera footage.

Firearms Sgt. Vernon Brink said an officer may point a weapon at a person during police activities including serving a search warrant, searching a building or during a
